

The Llamas and the Flood

Part 2

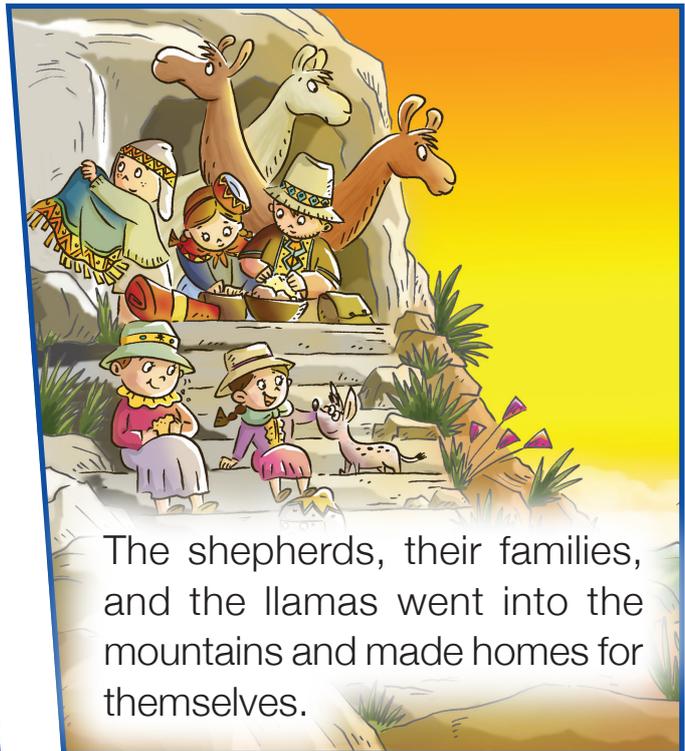

The next morning, the shepherds and their wives tried to warn the other villagers about the flood.

The llamas told us there will be a great flood! We must get out of here!

Don't be silly. Llamas can't talk.

The villagers stayed in the village. They did not think they were in danger.

The shepherds, their families, and the llamas went into the mountains and made homes for themselves.

Soon, it began to rain. It rained hard for four months.

The families looked down into the valley and saw that it was flooded.

After the flood, the shepherds and their families returned to the village.

The flood destroyed everything.

Everyone is gone.

The shepherds, their families, and the llamas stayed in the hills where it was safe. They did not want to return to the village.

Thank you for saving our lives. We'll trust you, always.
