

The Donkey's Journey

Part 1

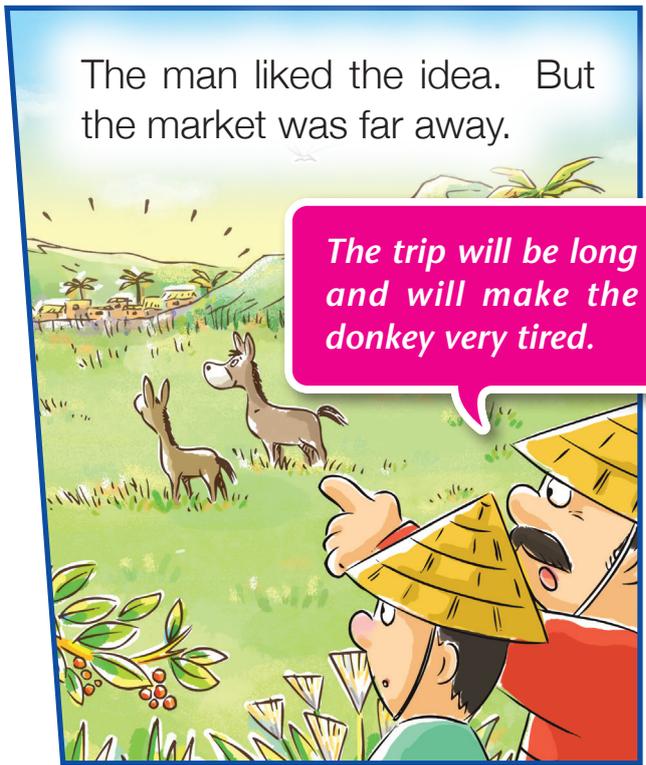

Once there was a man. He lived on a small farm and owned two donkeys.

But the man was troubled.

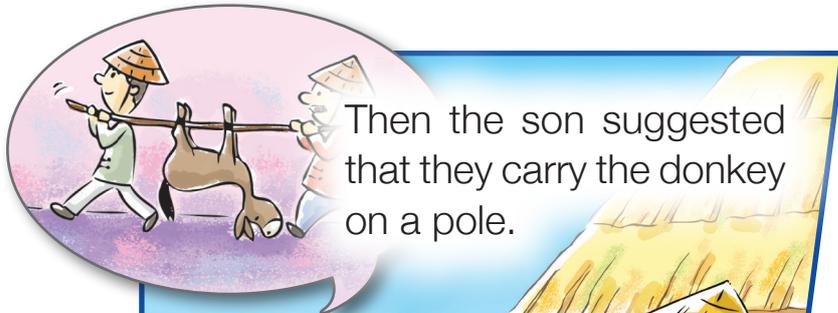

I don't need two donkeys.

We can sell the young donkey at the market.

The man liked the idea. But the market was far away.

The trip will be long and will make the donkey very tired.

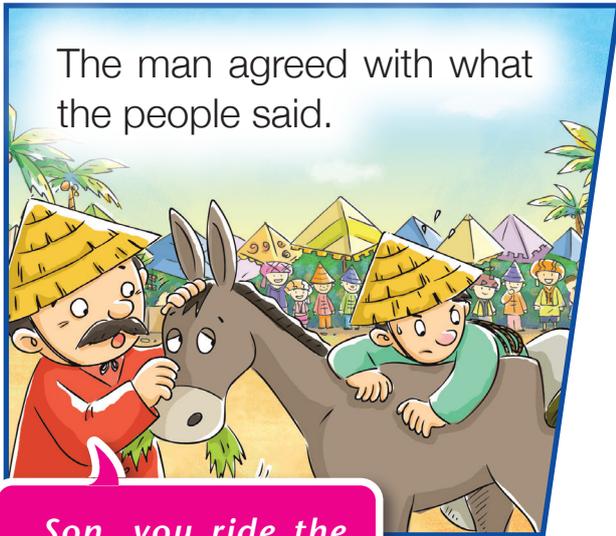

Then the son suggested that they carry the donkey on a pole.

That's a great idea!

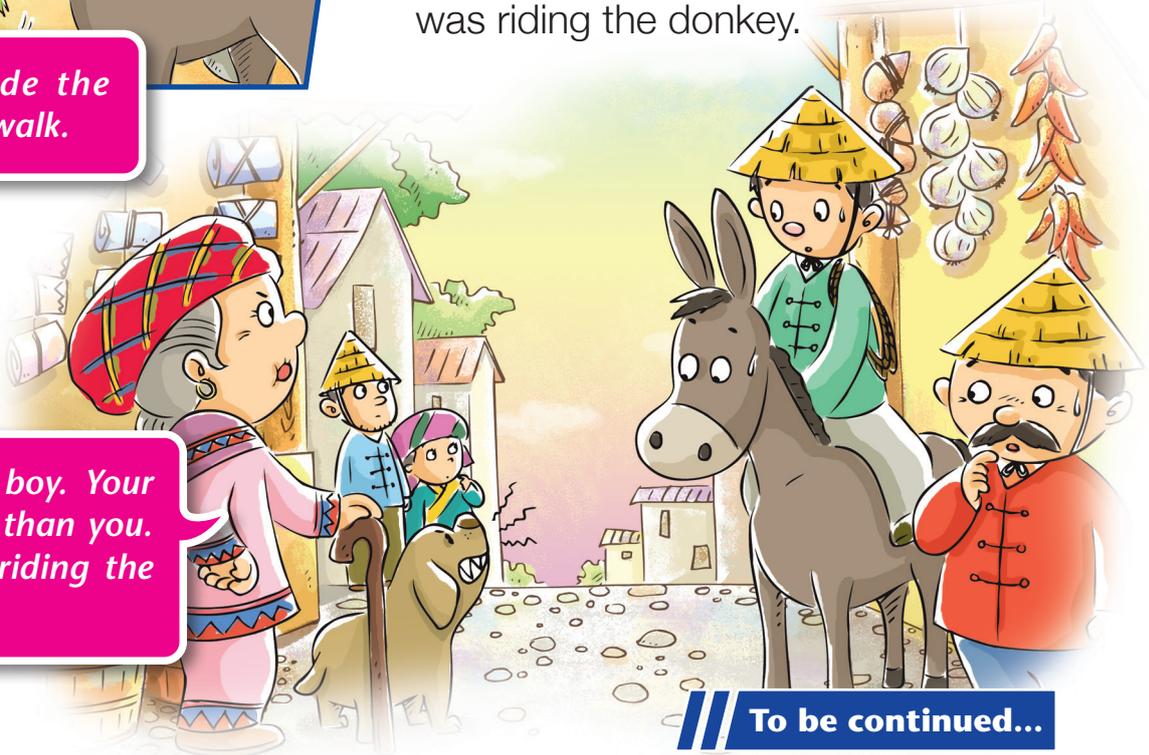

Donkeys are meant to carry people, not the other way around!

The man agreed with what the people said.

Son, you ride the donkey. I'll walk.

In the next village, there was an old woman. She scolded the son who was riding the donkey.

You're a selfish boy. Your father is older than you. He should be riding the donkey!
